Collision Course

By Rev. Donald L. Perryman, D.Min
The Truth Contributor.

One ever feels his two-ness - an American, a Negro; two souls, two thoughts, two unreconciled strivings; two warring ideals in one dark body, whose dogged strength alone keeps it from being torn asunder. - W. E. B. DuBois

When Phil Copeland defeated George Sarantou in the November 6 election for Lucas County Recorder, he could not have foreseen the consequences from the "double consciousness" of his representation and departure from Toledo City Council.

While peaceful, low-key and quiet himself, Copeland leaves behind both personal and political factions - divided, unreconciled and in conflict - a result of his dual identity on council as an African American labor leader.

Persons such as Toledo Board of Education President Lisa Sobecki, past District 1 candidate Jason Schreiner, and block watch leader Michael Dearth have expressed a strong interest in being appointed to fill the final 12 months of Copeland's uncompleted term.

However, it is the names of Jack Ford, a local African-American political icon, and little known Shaun Enright, that signal a potential political and cultural crash.

Labor unions, perhaps with elevated organizational testosterone levels and cognizant of having played a critical role in helping President Obama claim Ohio in the 2012 presidential election, have made it clearly known that they support the appointment of Enright to Copeland's vacated seat. Yet there are other voices clamoring for Council to appoint Ford instead.

Is Copeland's seat a union seat or a black seat?

"That's the dilemma," says Councilman Tyrone Riley, laughing loudly.

"If you ask Phil, he'll say it's a union seat," he adds.

"From what I understand, labor approached him to run for Recorder," continues Riley. "They put resources and manpower behind getting him elected and through that whole campaign. It was the unions and not the party, and he's the only African-American office holder at the county level. And so what the union has done is to say, 'listen, we're going to help the black community and try to get someone elected because your party wouldn't endorse you through the primary.'

"As for Jack, I'm a fan and nobody has more experience than he does, but I'm not 100 percent sold that he's the best person for the job. There have been five or six others that have reached out to me for support and I plan to listen and keep my options open,"

Paula Hicks-Hudson is also currently non-committed. "It depends on what camp you're in," she reasons. "If labor, I think you'll be supporting Shaun. Other camps will support Jack, who is pushing for it, or possibly Lisa Sobecki. I, personally, would like to see somebody with a clear idea of how the city should run and not be someone who will merely criticize and throw grenades, but bring policy-making skills and the ability to build consensus.

"There is a need for labor's voice on council, but whoever the person is needs to go through the screening process with the party, who will send its recommendation to council. That's what I did," says Paula.

Will the Democratic Party screening process be a mere formality, ultimately leaving one fewer person of color on Council at a time when a generation of young black and brown males is drowning in its own blood?

With organized labor having flooded the national election with an abundance of campaign money and volunteers to get-out-the-vote, unions also provide 52 percent of the local Democratic Party's operational support and heavily finances many local candidates. "They have drawn a line in the sand in what is essentially a power play and said Shaun is who we want," said one party insider.

Yet there are other determined voices clamoring just as loudly for Ford. "He is extremely intelligent, was mayor of Toledo, on City Council, minority leader in the statehouse and has been a political godfather to many current politicians. He's not going to let Mayor Bell get away with anything and he works well with other Democrats. Most importantly he doesn't have a criminal background," stated another source.

But with two self-willed entities such as Jack Ford and the unions, a collision could potentially burst the fragile labor/black community alliance which helped to re-elect President Obama and will be needed to get the president's progressive second term policy agenda implemented

Can anything be done to avoid the wreck?

"Jack Ford is extremely savvy," states the insider. "I understand that Shaun and Jack met for lunch on Black Friday. Whoever is appointed to the seat will also possibly have to run in September and November 2013 for the full term.

"At that time there will only be three incumbents - [Rob] Ludeman, [Adam] Martinez and [Steve] Steel - running for six available seats. Enright needs the platform that the temporary appointment brings right now. Jack needs support for a future campaign."

And I smell a deal in the works.

AFT Announces Campaign to End Testing Fixation

Special to The Truth

AFT's Weingarten: "Public education should be obsessed with high-quality teaching and learning, not high-stakes testing."

The American Federation of Teachers announced last week the second phase of its campaign against excessive testing, "Learning Is More Than a Test Score," which will include a policy agenda that takes into account what we learn from teachers, parents and others.

The AFT's efforts to help all children succeed – by de-emphasizing testing and ensuring instead that instruction includes the arts and physical education and is based on high-quality standards such as the Common Core State Standards – began earlier this year with an online petition and a resolution stating that testing should inform, not impede, teaching and learning.

"Public education should be obsessed with high-quality teaching and learning, not high-stakes testing. Tests have a role to play, but today's fixation with them is undermining what we need to do to give kids a challenging and well-rounded education and to fairly measure teachers' performance," AFT President Randi Weingarten said.

The AFT's campaign, "Learning Is More Than a Test Score," includes a website, a toolkit and other items advocating an end to the over-reliance on testing and calling for the restoration of teaching and learning to its proper role at the forefront of the education process. The AFT will be working with affiliates, communities, school districts and states to help ensure that testing does not encroach on the instructional time students need to learn how to think critically and creatively.

In the next few months, the AFT will convene leaders and external experts to look at promising practices and develop a road map of promising policy alternatives to the testing fixation. The Albert Shanker Institute also will devote its Good Schools conference to this topic.

The AFT believes that tests are an important tool to diagnose students' strengths and weaknesses and that, when used correctly, they can help teachers identify students who are falling behind and those who need more challenging work. "As we push for better, higher standards in education, we must ensure that teaching to high standards doesn't devolve into teaching to low-level tests," Weingarten said.

The over-emphasis on high-stakes tests has forced teachers to spend an excessive amount of time on test preparation, actual testing and data collection at the expense of more engaging instruction. The AFT is working with its affiliates on state legislation concerning the appropriate use of tests as well as on collecting and analyzing data on how much time and money is being spent on testing and test preparation. Some disturbing examples of over-testing and test prep include:

* A superintendent in Monroe County, N.Y., testified that in the first two months of school, more than 20,000 pretests were administered to 4,000 students.

* Teachers in Florida say their schools have some form of testing 80-90 school days a year.

* In Texas, up to 45 days each school year are spent on testing activities.

"The public gets it, and opposition to the testing fixation is increasing," Weingarten said. For example:

* Thousands have signed the AFT's petition calling for a more balanced approach to public education by prioritizing high-quality instruction informed by appropriate and useful assessments.

* 870 school districts in Texas (or 85 percent of all Texas districts) have passed a resolution saying that high-stakes standardized tests are "strangling" public schools.

* The Florida School Board Association and dozens of Florida school districts have passed resolutions calling for an end to high-stakes tests as the primary factor in evaluating student, teacher, school and district achievement.

View the AFT's high-stakes testing petition and the resolution on the testing fixation passed by the AFT delegates.

NAACP Polls Black Voters

*By Joi C. Ridley
Special to The Truth*

For the civil rights community, Election Day was an undeniable victory. Ballot initiatives promoting equality were passed in several key states and Minnesota's attempt to restrict voting rights was struck down. An NAACP swing state poll conducted in the days leading up to the election showed that African Americans were engaged on these issues, and offered a snapshot of the black electorate at this point in history.

The NAACP's polling found that a majority of African Americans support the Dream Act and marriage equality, both of which passed in Maryland on Election Night. The data revealed majority support for marriage equality measures. Fifty percent of African-American voters favor a constitutional right to marry, with 40 percent opposing it. Ninety-three percent of respondents favor the Dream Act, which allows undocumented youth to seek U.S. citizenship (71 percent strongly, 21 percent somewhat).

The poll, which interviewed 1,600 African-American voters in Ohio, Virginia, Florida and Georgia also suggested that, despite their very high support for the Democratic Party with President Obama at the helm, African Americans could be convinced to vote for a Republican candidate. Only 47 percent of respondents were "very enthusiastic" for the next Democrat candidate following President Obama and 15 percent are unsure of how enthusiastic they will be in 2016. Moreover, 14 percent of African Americans said they are more likely to vote for a Republican in the future if the candidate has civil rights issues on his or her agenda.

"This data reveals opportunities for the GOP to improve its relationship with our community. It suggests that the Democratic Party should not assume it will see the 2008 and 2012 levels of Black turnout in 2016," said Benjamin Todd Jealous, president and CEO of the NAACP.

Jobs and the economy topped the list of most important issues to African-American voters, earning the vote of 60 percent of respondents. Ninety-five percent of respondents believe the federal government should engage in job creation opportunities for all Americans. Respondents also believe that the federal government has a role to play in education (95 percent), health care (96 percent), and job creation (96 percent).

However, support for the federal government is not support for government dependency. Eighty-one percent of respondents believe that success depends on self-reliance and determination, while only 14 percent disagree.

"This poll paints a picture of how African-American interests fit into our new political calculus," said

Marvin Randolph, NAACP's senior vice president for Campaigns.

This calculus includes an African-American voting bloc that made up more than 13 percent of the voting electorate for the last two presidential elections, according to national exit polls. The NAACP helped encourage this high turnout by registering more than 432,000 new voters and educating and activating 1.2 million voters – both historic highs for the Association.

"This data underscores the decisive role our community played in key battleground states," said Jealous.

"People have said traditional America has died. In actuality, the real America, full of diverse opinions and values, has now risen. That real America is what our nation was built upon."

Giving the Economy a Boost This Holiday

Toledo Choose Local encourages buying gifts from locally-owned businesses with Shift Your Shopping campaign

By Kyle Cubbon
Special to The Truth

The holidays are upon us and the shopping has begun. Toledo Choose Local, a non-profit association devoted to raising awareness about the benefits of local spending, has created a "Shift Your Shopping" campaign to assist area shoppers in choosing local.

The "Shift Your Shopping" campaign seeks to match local-lovers with independent businesses.

The campaign kicks off on Friday, November 30 and continues through the month of December.

Toledo Choose Local is partnering with the Arts Commission's Holiday Loop event in downtown Toledo for its Shift Your Shopping kick-off. The Holiday Loop offers participants free bus transportation to art galleries and businesses which have agreed to stay open late, as well as offer art and holiday gifts for affordable prices. Toledo Choose Local will provide space, at 610 Adams St., for some of its non-downtown members to display and sell their wares.

The Toledo Choose Local website (www.toledochooselocal.org), provides shoppers with maps of suggested locally-owned businesses. There are three maps: Westgate and Mall area; Monroe Street (Talmadge to Main St. in Sylvania); and Perrysburg-Maumee.

Shoppers are urged to use the maps to find and shop at locally-owned, independent businesses.

Dollars spent locally increase the overall local economy. A research project conducted by Civil Economics found that choosing a locally-owned store generates almost four times as much economic benefit for the surrounding region as shopping at a chain. Local retailers return an average of 52 percent of their revenue to the local economy, compared with just 14 percent for the chain retailer.

Locally-owned retailers and restaurants add character to a community; their owners tend to be more attentive and responsive to their customers and they rely on relationships and quality to sell their products and services.

Throughout the campaign, participating businesses will hold Facebook sales. Toledo Choose Local will post to its Facebook page a special sale offered by a local business. The sale will be of short duration and only publicized on Toledo Choose Local's Facebook page. Shoppers will have a limited time to take advantage of the sale.

Toledo Choose Local wants shoppers to give local retailers and restaurants a try this holiday season. Retailers will be offering a variety of unique and enjoyable gift items. Between stores, stop at a local eatery and refuel.

For more information on Toledo Choose Local, visit www.toledochooselocal.org or search Toledo Choose Local on Facebook.

Archer Daniels Midland Company Awards $30,000 Grant For Mobile Food Pantry in Rural Areas

Special to The Truth

The Toledo Northwestern Ohio Food Bank was awarded a $30,000 grant from Archer Daniels Midland Company for their Mobile Food Pantry program. "In the past 2 years, our Mobile Food Pantry has experienced a 52% increase in the number of people serviced," said James M. Caldwell, president and CEO. "This grant will make a tremendous difference to our clients in the rural areas."

"The Mobile Food Pantry has proven to be a valuable resource to our member agencies, especially those with limited storage capacity and without the resources to travel product to and from our warehouse," he said. The Mobile Food Pantry delivers tons of fresh bread, fresh produce, dairy and other items to member agencies at no charge.

"ADM is committed to making a difference in the communities where we live and work, and we are excited to continue to expand our work with Feeding America," said ADM chairman and CEO Patricia Woertz. "We have already seen our farmer partners step up to contribute to local food banks through the Invest An Acre program, but as it became more and more apparent that this would be an exceptionally difficult year for rural communities, we took action to do more. With this investment, we are proud to help support mobile food and meal delivery in 30 ADM communities."

ADM directed $30,000 grants to 30 individual Feeding America member food banks in 21 states for mobile distributions over two years. ADM based their selection on the presence of local ADM facilities, employees, and customers as well as local food insecurity and government relations.

December 1 is World AIDS Day

By Michelle McCaster, NA, ProMedica
Special to The Truth

Can you recall in 1991 when Magic Johnson made the courageous decision to share with the world that he was HIV positive? Well, it has been over two decades and he is now a hugely successful businessman, a basketball commentator and a loving husband and grandfather who is living life to the fullest. Most importantly, he still raises money and awareness in an effort to create the same limitless future for others. He is only one of many success stories of individuals living with this once devastating and detrimental disease.

December 1, 2012 is World AIDS Day and I have to ask this one question, "Do you know your status?" African Americans account for the greatest number of new HIV infections in the United States. (And although African Americans make up 13 percent of the U.S. population, they accounted for 44 percent of new HIV infections in 2009.)

To date, over 230,000

African Americans have died of AIDS - nearly 40 percent of total deaths - and of the more than one million people living with HIV in the United States today, almost half are black. And yet, as a racial group, African Americans represent just 13 percent of the US population.

The disparity is due to unique issues African Americans face, including a greater incidence of sexually transmitted diseases, poverty and the negative perception of AIDS, which encourages less awareness of the disease and associated risky behavior.

While the reasons for infections being high in the African-American community are complex, there is hope that through prevention and programming there will be raised awareness and people will get the information they need to help combat this disease. Technology has also allowed us to improve testing and medications regimens so that people with the disease are able to live improved qualities of life.

We openly talk about and advocate for diseases such as breast cancer, sickle cell anemia and diabetes. It is now time to break the silence regarding HIV/AIDS. The disease no longer has to be a death sentence so I encourage you to know your status and get tested because knowing is so much better than being in the dark.

For information on a testing site near you please call 1-800-CDC-INFO or refer to the information on the right for local testing sites.

The members of the Toledo chapter of the Links, Inc. celebrated their 40th Anniversary Emerald Ball, November 17 at the Parkway Place in Maumee. Links incorporated is a women's service organization based on friendship and service with over 12,000 members nationally and internationally.

The Emerald Ball is an event held to raise funds for the chapter's programming. This year, the proceeds will benefit the "Girls Circle" program which is a partnership Guests adorned in formal attire enjoyed a grazing style buffet, followed by a short program. They topped the night off with dancing.

Family House Open House

Family House, the second largest emergency shelter for families in the state of Ohio, located at 669 Indiana Ave, held an open house November 15 in Celebration of Community Support. The open house was held as a way of showing appreciation to the City of Toledo and United Way as well as area universities, businesses and foundations that come together to support the homeless families served by Family House. According to Reneé Palacios, executive director, what makes the Family House's mission different is that they keep families together.

She states, "A lot of shelters segregate by gender and we don't because when you lose your home, the last thing you have is your family so you want to keep them together. Our mission is very important in that it keeps families together so that they can stay strong together."

With the holiday season fast approaching, when asked what their needs for Christmas were, Palacios replied, "Every year we have kids who ask, 'Will Santa know I'm at the homeless shelter?' or because they don't live where they used to live they want to know, 'Will Santa find me?' "We assure them that Santa comes to Family House so we are always looking for

The Holiday Book Gift Guide, Pt 1

By Terri Schlichenmeyer
The Truth Contributor

Last January, you loaded up. You loaded up on all the left-over, on-sale, clearance-priced Christmas wrapping paper you could lay your hands on. You bought Hanukkah bags, Santa wrap, gifty things with poinsettias and reindeer and holly and you put it all away because you knew darn well that you'd use it in due time.

Well, now's the time. You got the paper out. You just need to find things to use it with. But sometimes, it's hard to find just the right thing for everybody on your list, isn't it? There's always somebody who's impossible to buy for... and that's when you should head to the bookstore to look for these great reads....

NOVELS

Set in Minnesota as the last century began, The Lighthouse Road by Peter Geyre is a book about homesickness, love, survival and life the way our ancestors lived. This novel is set in the winter and is so evocative that you'll want an extra blanket when you take it by the fireplace.

And speaking of snow, here's another cold-weather novel to give: The Vanishing Act by Mette Jakobsen. It's the story of a father and daughter who live on a snow-covered island. When a dead boy washes up on the shore one day, the young girl tries to learn the truth about him and about her mother's death.

So your giftee loves his (or her) cell phone above all else? Then wrap up Hidden Things by Doyce Testerman. When a mysterious text message arrives from her best friend, a woman wonders what he's talking about... and then the police arrive. Her BFF is dead. So how did he leave her a message an hour before he died? (I'm not telling. Give the book).

Another book about friendship and dastardly secrets is The Unfinished Work of Elizabeth D. by Nichole Bernier. It's the story of a journal found when a woman dies, and the realization of the woman's best friend that she never knew the woman at all...

Novel lovers will be so happy when they unwrap Motherland by Amy Sohn! This is a book about five mothers and fathers in various places around New York City, and how they deal with modern marriage and relationships. This book is perfect when teamed with a new mug and a box of hot cocoa... Another book novel lovers will eat up is One Last Thing Before I Go by Jonathan Tropper, which is the story of one man's last days and his attempt to fix what's broken before he's gone.

Is someone on your list bereft because there's no new Twilight book this season? Fear not, and wrap up Dark Frost by Jennifer Estep. This book – the next in the Mythos Academy series – is dark, mysterious, and romantic, and it's just the thing for your favorite undead novel-lover. Another book to try is The Taken by Vicki Petterson. That's a mystery set between mortal and immortal worlds, where whodunit might be more like WHATdunit.

What would your giftee do if she knew the future? Would she know that you wrapped up The Lost Prince by Selden Edwards for her? This is the story of a woman who believes that she knows every historical event that will happen for the rest of her life. So will she let things happen, or will she try to change the way events unfold?

You know how much your friends love to read. So why not wrap up Heft by Liz Moore? This is a novel about an unlikely friendship between a 550-pound man and a 17-year-old kid who is living a life he never expected. Give it to your friend – then borrow it back. Another book about a friendship – this one, not what it seems – is Man in the Blue Moon by Michael Morris. It's the story of a single mother who befriends a banker who offers to help, but he's no help at all...

Somewhere on your list is a person who loves street lit. That's the person who wants to see Murderville 2: The Epidemic by Ashley & JaQuavis beneath the tree. This is a shoot-em-up thriller about gangstas, girls, and grit but beware: this ain't Grandma's murder mystery! Another book to try is You Get What You Play For by Jeff Farley. That's the story of a Brooklyn girl with dreams, and what happens when she gives them up for the love of a boy who's wrong for her.

If your giftee can't get enough of the Undead, then you can't go wrong with Zombie: A Novel by J.R. Angelella. It's the story of a boy who's obsessed with zombies, watching as many of those kinds of movies as he can. It serves him well when something mysteriously happens to his father. Wrap it up with a nightlight.

Your giftee has seen The Godfather so many times, you lost count. So this year, wrap up The Family Corleone by Ed Falco, based on a screenplay by Mario Puzo. This prequel to The Godfather doesn't sleep with the fishes. It's really something they can't refuse (sorry. I couldn't resist). Another family-type novel, this one of a different kind of edgy, is The Lola Quartet by Emily St. John Mandel. This is the story of a man who tries to find the child he recently learned he had, for himself, and to save her life.

Definitely for a grown-up to unwrap, The Water Children by Anne Berry is the story of four children, each touched by tragedy and water, and how they come together to survive and heal. I also liked Austin and Emily by Frank Turner Hollon, the story of a 347-pound man, his stripper girlfriend, a car filled with cats, and their cross-country trip together in search of happiness.

You already know your giftee is a mystery fan. You know you want to wrap up a mystery for her to wrap up. So why not give Someone Bad and Something Blue by Miranda Parker? The main character in this novel is a gritty single mom / bail recovery agent / PI sleuth, which pretty much tells you that this is a good gift, doesn't it? Another mysterious read I think your giftee will like is Accelerated by Bronwen Hruska. It's the story of a father, a son, and the boy's not-quite-right private school that should have his best interests in mind – or not?

Romance readers will love the Civil War novel Blue Asylum by Kathy Hepinstall. It's the story of a Virginia plantation wife who's committed to an asylum and falls in love there. She has a chance to escape... but will she go without her beloved?

Another romance to try is Heaven Should Fall by Rebecca Coleman. It's the story of love and tragedy, an unexpected baby and a woman's sacrifice. Another book for the Civil War fan is Wilderness by Lance Weller. It's the story of an elderly man who moved to the wilderness after the Civil War, but at the end of his life, must undertake a journey that won't be easy...

Another historical novel to give is Illuminations by Mary Sharratt. Based on the life of Hildegard von Bingen, this novel-based-on-fact will delight anyone who's a fan of this Medieval healer.

If you're looking for something small, perhaps for a stocking-stuffer, then look for Big Ray by Michael Kimball. It's a skinny novel about a man's love for his dead father, despite that the father was less-than-loving when the man was younger. Yes, this is a small novel but it's big on emotion.

No doubt your giftee is someone who takes his (or her!) reading seriously, so how about some seriously great books? Look for Creole Belle by James Lee Burke, for instance. It's the latest in the Dave Robicheaux series but this time, Dave is lying in the hospital. When he's visited by a woman who supposedly disappeared weeks ago, it's another mystery for him to solve... if he can.

You might also want to wrap up Laura Lamont's Life in Pictures by Emma Straub, a debut novel about a small-town girl who makes it big in the Big City. But fame isn't cheap, and it isn't free – it comes with a price, which may mean losing her very identity.

If your giftee loves great big novels, both in page count and in story line, then you'll want to give her Televange by Pamela King Cable. This is a novel about a woman who was a victim of the times in which she was raised, and what she does when her dreams are snatched away from her.

GENERAL NON-FICTION

Is there somebody on your list who loves to play with words? Then The Painted Word by Phil Cousineau (artwork by Gregg Chadwick) is a book to wrap up. This brick of a book is filled with fun words and their origins, as well as trivia about the things we say. Give it to your favorite student, wordsmith, or writer. Also look for Around the Writer's Block by Rosanne Bane. It's a book on solving that annoying brain block using scientific methods.

More books for the reader and writer: The Indie Author Revolution: An Insider's Guide to Self-Publishing by Dara M. Beevas will help your budding author do self-publishing right. Also look for Read This! with an introduction by Ann Patchett. It's a book filled with favorites from America's favorite independent booksellers.

At this holiest time of year, has your giftee decided that it's time to redefine the reason for the season? Then wrap up Faith Beyond Belief: Stories of Good People Who Left Their Church Behind by Margaret Placentra

Johnston. Through the stories of people who've decided to leave organized religion in favor of a spirituality all their own, this book will show your giftee that he's not alone in his journey. Another book that's good for anyone on a spiritual journey is Soul of Light: Works of Illumination by Joma Sipe. This beautiful book is filled with gorgeous pictures of geometrical light formations, and accompanying poems perfect for meditation. Buy it to give. Borrow it back.

Your giftee trusts you to find the best possible present to wrap, so why not find Liar and Outliers by Bruce Schneier? This is a book about trust, society, and how they work in tandem. It's the perfect gift for a deep thinker or for the science geek you love best. Another book to try is The 7 Laws of Magical Thinking by Matthew Hutson, which is a book about irrational thinking and how it's actually good for us. Wrap it up for that grown-up who still looks for gifts from Santa...

No doubt there's a fashionista on your gift list, and I'm betting there's nothing she'd love more than The Truth About Style by Stacy London. This is a book that will help her get the most out of accessories, ideas, color, and shoes. It will make her look her best, which is what she wants, not just for the holidays, but for the other 11 months of the year, too.

Another book to give to your fashion diva is Lilly: Palm Beach, Tropical Exuberance, and the Birth of a Fashion Legend by Kathryn Livingston. That's a memoir of the iconic Lilly Pulitzer; her clothes, her flair, and her life.

The new mom on your gift list will love reading Use Your Words: A Writing Guide for Mothers by Kate Hopper. This is a book by mothers that teaches mothers to write, journal, create, and blog the stories from their lives. Also look for Words Can Change Your Brain by Andrew Newberg, M.D. and Mark Robert Waldman. That's a book about how to use those words to start conversation and build trust with the person you're talking to.

The big question this year is, "What do we get Grandpa?" and the answer is Rural Wit & Wisdom by Jerry Apps. This is a re-release of an older book filled with old-time sayings, wise words, and humor, and it's going to make any old farmer or farmer-at-heart smile. Another book he'll like is A Farm in Wisconsin by Richard Quinney. Yes, the title is accurate, but anyone who grew up on a farm or in a small town – particularly anyone who loves looking at old pictures of that farm – will cherish this book.

For the artist-at-heart, or for your giftee who claims to be unable to draw, look for The Artist's Eye, Drawing Techniques and Figure Drawing by Peter Jenny. These three tiny little, palm-sized books are packed with instructions to turn anyone with a pencil into an almost-Rembrandt. The books are sold separately, but you'll really want to give all three. Artists will also love getting Building Taliesin: Frank Lloyd Wright's Home of Love and Loss by Ron McCrea. It's part biography, part history, and it's jam-packed with vintage pictures. How cool is that?

Even though the election is over, your gift might want more, more more, so why not wrap up Conspiracies and Secret Societies: The Complete Dossier, Second Edition by Brad Steiger and Sherry Steiger. Yes, this book is updated, which means it's filled with all new covert operations and spy-stuff. And for your giftee, that's good stuff. Another book your conspiracy fan might like is Degree Mills by Allen Ezell and Jon Bear, PhD. It's a book about an industry that sells fake diplomas, and how you can educate yourself against fraudulent "experts" with faux degrees.

You also might want to look for Bullspotting: Finding Facts in the Age of Misinformation by Loren Collins. It's a book about learning to winnow through the fact to spot a lie and vice versa. Good stuff, in this age of internet "forwards," don't you think?

Wrapping up The Art of Living Joyfully by Allen Klein is a dual gift. On one hand, your giftee will be happy you thought of her. On the other hand, this little book will give her joy for the whole year – and knowing that you gave it to her is a gift for you, isn't it?

Another book to look for is White Lilies in Autumn by Dustin W. Bradshaw. It's a book about getting through adversity, surviving bad times, and finding beauty and love in the everyday.

For the newlyweds on your list, show them how to stay newlyweds forever with Marriage Rules by Harriet Lerner, PhD. This book helps couples (married or not) to learn to stay together, both physically and emotionally. Wrap it up with a spa-day-for-two for an excellent gift. Or – if the opposite is true and you want to offer helpful comfort – try this book: Finding Love Again by Terri L. Orbach, PhD. There are six steps your giftee's new relationship. This book has 'em.

Also liked What Makes Love Last? by Dr. John Gottman, PhD and Nan Silver. It's a very instructional book on building trust and keeping love.

If the question was "What do you want for Christmas?" and the answer was "Nothing," then you could still be forgiven for wrapping up You Can Buy Happiness (and It's Cheap) by Tammy Strobel. It's the story of how one woman pared her life down to the basics – and remained happy doing it. You also might want to wrap up One Big Thing by Phil Cooke. It's a book that will help your favorite giftee to learn what (s)he was born to do. Wrap 'em both up with a journal for an excellent gift.

Everybody has a giftee with wanderlust in her soul, and Breakfast at the Exit Café by Wayne Grady and Merilyn Simonds is a great gift for her. This is the story of two Canadian citizens who decide to explore America. Wrap it up with a map and a journal for a great armchair-traveler's gift. Another travel book to look for is Detroit: A Biography by Scott Martelle. It's a book that looks long and hard at one of America's most interesting cities and the businesses and people who call it home.

Is there a "green" giftee on your list this year? Then wrap up Eating Dirt by Charlotte Gill. Canadian Gill spent recent time planting trees in the mountains, and this book is about her adventures, what she saw, and what she thinks about deforestation, tree history, our relationships with trees, and nature in general. Another book that would be greatly appreciated is Empire of the Beetle by Andrew Nikiforuk. It's a book about how a teensy little bug has beaten up gigantic forests and what can be done about it.

Is there a dancer on your gift list – or maybe someone who loves "DWTS"? Then you should find Dancers Among Us by Jordan Matter and wrap it up. This book is filled with photos of dancers in all kinds of situations and places; professionals, amateurs, weddings, and street dancers. It's also filled with people who are dancing for sheer joy. What's not to love about that?

SUMMARY

So there you are. Part one in a bunch of ideas for everybody whose name on your gift list makes you groan. What will you buy? Now you know.

Keep in mind that availability isn't guaranteed, titles may have changed, and some books might have to be ordered. But if these ideas aren't good enough, then ask your friendly bookseller for hints, tips, and favorites. They love to talk books – it's why they get paid the big bucks, you know.

So go. Get outta here. Go shopping.

Keep reading in future weeks for the rest of the list.

The Josh Project: A Local Community Program Gains Worldwide Exposure

By Michael Hayes
Minister of Culture

CNN's Hometown Hero program identifies ordinary citizens making extraordinary impacts on their communities. The Top Ten Heroes are rewarded for their efforts to improve the lives of others and a Hero of the Year is chosen from the 10 finalists. The global news leader lending a hand to the little guy/gal is truly a big deal. But the fact that it has brought the world stage right to Toledo, Ohio is a huge deal!

I want you all to read this interview and see why Wanda Butts is our very own Hometown Hero.

1. Please explain to our readers exactly how the Josh Project began and what its goals are:

On August 6, 2006, my 16 year old son, Josh, went to Bird Lake in Michigan with some of his friends from school. He had gone over there the day before and spent the night. The following day, a Sunday, I called his cell phone several times but couldn't get an answer. I tried calling him several times early in the afternoon around 1pm.

That evening around 6pm, someone called the house and hung up when I answered. They called back a few minutes later and said that Josh had drowned, and they couldn't find his body. The events that occurred throughout the rest of that day are a sketchy, blurred by the emotional pain and turmoil that ensued knowing that Josh was gone; dead by drowning and the confusion surrounding the fact that the rescue divers were unable to locate his body. He was never coming home again.

Fast forward to after the funeral and daily visits by well-wishers and sympathetic friends, I began researching "drowning" on the internet. Through my grief, I was looking for answers to questions like "Why did this happen?" "How did this happen?" "What could I have done, if anything, to prevent this from happening?"

One of the first things my research revealed was that 10 people drown every day in the United States. Two of the 10 deaths are of children ages 14 and younger. Drowning is the second leading cause of death for children ages 1-14.

The flip side of these statistics became the inspiration for the creation of The Josh Project, and can be summed up in three simple words: "Drowning is Preventable". The mission of The Josh Project is build basic swimming skills and knowledge of water safety to prevent drowning.

Our approach to preventing drowning is through water safety education and swim instruction.

2. Has our community and our city met The Josh Project with support or has it been an uphill battle trying to get the message out and find backing?

The members of our community and beyond the borders of northwest Ohio have been very generous with their support of our mission. We have been able to provide swim instruction and water safety education to over 1000 children and adults with help from every segment of our community. We have received invaluable help from a wide variety of community groups: churches, members of the legal and academic communities, foundations, small business owners, Greek organizations, social and special interest clubs, local schools, water safety organizations and individuals have been very active through monetary donations and countless hours of volunteer time. We are very humbled by the outpouring for their support.

If I were to describe any "uphill battles" as you say, it would be for parents and students to take our message seriously and make the commitment to ensuring that their children are water safe. Let me explain. Lots of kids went to the pool this summer, got in, splashed around and maybe even put their heads under the water, but that's not swimming. Swimming is being able to go from one side of the pool to the other without touching the bottom of the pool or holding on to the side. Whenever we visit a group of children and ask how many of them know how to swim, every hand in the room goes up. But, when I ask the follow up question, "how many of you can jump into to 12 feet of water and swim to the other side?", all but two or three hands go down. If the answer to the latter is no, then that child, someone's son or daughter, is not water safe and at a greater risk of drowning.

- Facts:
- 70 percent of African-American children can NOT swim
  - 62 percent of Hispanic children can NOT swim
  - Statistics from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention show that African-American children between the ages of five and 14 are three times more likely to drown than white children of the same age range.

3. Please explain to our readers exactly what it means to be a CNN hometown hero, how you got involved and how they can lend you their support:

For me to be a CNN hometown hero is a chance of a lifetime! I never thought The Josh Project would receive international attention. I just wanted to help change the statistics, help others to know the facts and emphasize importance of water safety in our community. I was never informed of any these facts. I got involved because I was nominated to be a hero by a church family member. My community can support me by voting every day until 11/28/12 at cnnheroes.com - up to 10 times a day.

We can support each other by encouraging everyone we know to learn how to swim and making sure that we know what to do in case of a water emergency. Learn CPR, if you can't swim; wear a life jacket; put life jackets on children under four feet tall, even if they can swim.

4. Overall, what impact do you hope to have on our area?

Our hope is that every child in the Toledo area learns how to swim. Knowing how to swim goes beyond water safety. The world of aquatics is huge. Children who learn to swim are able to participate in a wide variety of individual and team sports: racing, diving, water polo, rowing, sailing, and canoeing are just a few. As young adults and college students, knowing how swim can open the opportunity to jobs as lifeguards, swim instructors, swim coaches etc. Swimming is the only sport that can save a life.

5. What are your thoughts on various initiatives to get children to become more physically active?

We definitely support the "Let's Move" initiative spearheaded by First Lady Michelle Obama. Much like drowning, health complications from a sedentary lifestyle can be prevented through education and opportunity. Childhood obesity and diabetes are at epidemic levels in our community. We would like to see more attention focused on getting children into the water who may have limited mobility due to excessive weight gain. Also swimming is great for children who aren't ready for or are uninterested in other sports. Water is the "great equalizer", we all weigh the same in the pool and it's a great form of exercise that can be enjoyed by all ages and fitness levels.

6. What does the future hold for you and The Josh Project?

The Josh Project would like to continue to grow and expand. Immediately, we are in our sixth year of lessons and we plan to continue forever. Last year we started an outreach program with schools and church groups in order to reach as many children as possible. Many families have barriers such as transportation that limit their ability to access swim facilities on a regular basis. Usually, it only takes one incident that happens by chance, when a child goes to a hotel party or a lake with friends, that results in an unnecessary fatality. Consequently, we decided to take the message straight to the children to educate and inform them about being safe while in and around water. We'd like to make outreach a regular part of our program services.

In the near future, we'd like to invite the community to celebrate what would have been Josh's 23rd birthday on December 9 at our annual Soul Food for Swimming Dinner. Please visit our website for ticket information.

For the years to come, we'd like to expand our efforts here in Toledo. We currently offer lessons year round, one day a week. We'd like to offer our lessons more often and possibly in more locations. With the continued support of our community and grant funds from the CNN Hero of the Year contest, we hope to do just that.
