Knowing How to Say Thanks

By Rev. Donald L. Perryman, D.Min.

Thanksgiving is my favorite holiday. Food, friends, family, football. I’m ready to start cooking!

- Yolonda Pierce

“Mimi, I want stuffing and mashed potatoes for Thanksgiving this year,” blurted out my eight-year-old granddaughter to her grandmother. “We don’t do stuffing, we cook dressing,” my wife politely countered as I did a double take.

While Thanksgiving and Christmas are also about the intensely social elements of football, family and friends there is, perhaps, nothing more culture-specific than our food when talking about holiday celebrations. And, more importantly, for the uninformed, black culinary practices provide opportunities for cultural learning experiences.

An increasingly multicultural society where inter-cultural and inter-generational holiday celebrations are taking place highlights the opportunity for the unenlightened to commit an embarrassing cultural faux pas while having fun at black holiday gatherings.

In his blog post “How to Survive Black Thanksgiving as a Non-Black Guest,” author Michael W. Twitty offers a few lighthearted and satirical suggestions to avoid making these potentially awkward missteps. “We don’t call cornbread ‘stuffing’…we call it dressing,” echoing my wife. “Calling it ‘stuffed,’ is a dead giveaway you don’t know the quality (of the food). Throw that boxed stuff away,” he humorously quips.

Yet, on a more relevant note, holiday merrymaking is not only an opportunity for members of diverse cultural and generational experiences to socialize and learn from each other, special days like Thanksgiving and Christmas also provide space to exchange the negativity, stress and strain of daily contemporary living for gratitude. Coming together around food – especially to say thanks - is something that all cultures value and what is, conceivably, the best way to keep our lives and relationships sane and fresh.

A Black Thanksgiving or Christmas Menu?

A great holiday menu from the black experience might include Roasted Turkey with orange glaze, light and fluffy Savory Cornbread Dressing, Wild Rice, Oven Roasted Fresh Green Beans, Scalloped Potatoes, Classy Southern Sweet Potato Pie and Peach Iced Tea.

Meanwhile, for the novice or the culturally unbriefed, just remember that technique, texture and taste are KEY. Here is our recipe for classic cornbread “Dressing” from the black culinary perspective. Bon Appetit!

Willetta’s Light and Fluffy Savory Corn Bread Dressing

For Corn Bread

Ingredients:
- 3 cups Aunt Jenima self-rising cornmeal
- 2 cups buttermilk
- 3 eggs
- 1 stick of butter

Preparation: Mix the cornmeal, buttermilk and eggs together until the batter is smooth. Melt the butter in a large skillet and pour the butter into the batter. Mix well and then pour the batter into the skillet. Bake at 400°F for 45 minutes or until the cornbread is firm and brown.

For Sausage Dressing

Ingredients:
- 8 chicken thighs
- 1 lb savory sage sausage
- 1 large onion (chopped)
- 1 large green bell pepper (chopped)
- 2 cups seasoned clontons
- 4 tbsp dried sage
- 2 bay leaves
- 4 eggs
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 4 cups chicken stock

Remember as a kid you would play a game in which if you “threw” rock, paper, stick or scissors and you lost you would try to test your opponent by saying, “Let’s do two out of three!”

If you lost again, you would pout and ask to do, “Three out of four!”

Finally, it got to the point that no matter how many “redo’s” you were seeking, you lost! The evidence was against you and no matter how many “redo’s” you were seeking, you were indubitably stamped as a loser.

Well, the same thing is happening with Herr Trump with respect to those who want to desperately erase the label of “racist” off his forehead. They are constantly seeking ways to show the public that their guy in the White House is not tainted or stained with racial meanness.

But knowing Trump as we do, his lack of mechanisms to show his roll about his antipathy towards people of color has shown to be worn thin so that the brakes on the car are grinding and there are metal shavings are all over the road.

Nothing brings this to light more than his ongoing and recent inflammatory attacks on three credentialed black women journalists.

In spite of Herr Trump’s demagoguery on all things black and brown in chiding the knowingly bogue birtherism smear regarding President Obama, his casting of the people of Mexico who were coming to America as being rapists and criminals and his giving credence to Neo Nazis in Charlottesville, Trump continues his unabated rampage on people of color.

Recently he directed his columny at Yamiche Alexandre, April Ryan and Abby Phillip when they simply asked him pointed questions about his policy (?) positions on the Ken Mueller investigation and relevant issues of Herr Trump being identified as a white nationalist.

Of course Herr Trump, not known as being rudimentarily identified with having a working knowledge of historical facts and the proper workings of the government, was quick to debase and insult the black women journalists.

For Herr Trump it appears that he gets some mean satisfaction that he can drop nasty verbal bombs on black women and black women journalists in particular.

Could it be that he simply loves to build the media or that he also takes great delight in haranguing black women? Remember his constant hit on Congresswoman Maxine Waters as being, “Low IQ”?

Or how could one not forget the verbal assaults on the widow of the black serviceman who lost his life in the country of Niger? Or calling former White House staffer Omarosa a “dog.”

Does the battering of Colin Kaepernick for his taking a knee under the national anthem, ring a bell?

And please do not forget his diatribe on the African sh’t hole countries and and all Africans living in mud huts and his abuse of the country of Haiti, attacks on CNN host, Don Lemon, LeBron James, Andrew Gillum (running for governor of Florida was called a thief) and Stacey Adams (running for governor of Georgia was denied until for the office).

When it comes to issues of respect and dignity of people of color, you can be assured that Herr Trump will tread a way, howbeit large or small, to minimize their importance or intelligence and to humiliate them in public.

Herr Trump takes a seemingly perverse pleasure in mocking people of color and downgrading them to either smeltons or buffoons or racial caricatures that his sake can also use as objects of amusement or derision.

If you witnessed Herr Trump’s last press conference (after the results of the midterm elections whipping he received), he was anxious and sporting for a fight and who better to whin on or insult than black women.

For any black Republicans (an oxymoron in this day and age to say the least!) who still try to hold the line and shine a favorable light on their party’s leader, good luck with that!

Trump shows no respect for people of color and his contempt for black female journalists borders on being rabid. He would never sit down one on one with a knowledgeable black female journalist because he knows that she would eat his lunch and for good measure, take his anunt bed money.

Repeatedly, Herr Trump has shown that he has no class, no working knowledge of the ways of the world nor how to negotiate and win friends in order to pass needed legislation.

Trump is for all intensive purposes, a frightened lone negotiator a world in which he is both angry at and confused about and only his pathetic rathes surrounded by similarly thinking people given him a fleeting, “sugar high” from a job that he has shown to be totally inept.

As the Mueller probe seemingly may be winding up, you will see Herr Trump acting more like a fratic rabbit running for his political life than a mature statesman who is able to put both hands on the steering wheel and cobble together any meaningful legislation before the prophetic 2020 elections.

You can only hope that more journalists will take their cues from this unwarranted assault on their profession and they will take on, as me, this rabbit for the singular purpose of exposing him for what he has shown himself to be: a fraud and a con whose end game is to weak havoc on a government that he seemingly disdains.

Ohio House Democratic state lawmakers today voted against House Bill (HB) 228, the so-called Stand Your Ground bill, a Republican-sponsored effort to loosen gun safety standards by reducing firearm offenses, making it harder to prosecute gun violence cases and preempting local authority to enact commonsense safety protections for Ohio families.

“This free pass on gun violence makes us all less safe,” said House Democratic Leader Fred Strahorn (D-Dayton). “Instead of listening to the thousands of students, parents and families who’ve spoken out and marched for commonsense gun safety measures, we’re turning our backs on them with this divisive, tone-deaf bill that goes dangerously beyond our reason-able self-defense laws to make Ohio a ‘shoot first’ state.”

HB 228 would reverse Ohio’s standard of proof in gun violence cases, requiring the state to prove that a defendant was not using self-defense. In addition, the bill would erode home-rule authority by preempting local control over gun safety regulations. Finally, HB 228 reduces firearm offenses to minor misdemeanors and eliminates certain requirements for those driving with a concealed weapon.

“At a time where our country is plagued by gun violence and shootings of unarmed African Americans, passing Stand Your Ground legislation is com-plete disregard for the safety of all Ohioans. Removing the duty to retreat provision validates race-based fear as a defense for using deadly force,” said House Minority Whip Emilia Sykes (D-Akron), “Once again, the Republican majority is putting the special interests of their financial backers first instead of prioritizing the issues that matter to Ohio’s families.”

The bill comes amid unprecedented gun violence across the country. The recent massacre in Thousand Oaks, CA marked 307 mass shootings in the then-311 days in 2018. According to USA Today, four of the largest mass shootings in the last 50 years have happened this year alone.

A sheriff’s deputy was killed in the Thousand Oaks incident, four officers were wounded in the recent killing spree at a Pittsburgh Synagogue and just this week, a black security guard was gunned down by police as he tried to break up a fight at Chicago-area bar. Despite these incidents, gun advocates continue to call for more armed personnel in schools, places of worship and other public spaces across the country.

Democrats offered a “red flag” gun-safety amendment on the House floor, the same measure introduced by Gov. John Kasich in March 2018, but it was defeated largely on party lines.

“Thousands of students, moms, families — and even our own Republican Governor — have asked us to put commonsense gun safety laws in place. But this isn’t commonsense, it’s nonsense that will cost us lives and increase gun violence,” said House Assistant Minority Whip Brigid Kelly(D-Cincinnati). “We want safe streets and neighborhoods, but this bill makes us all less safe.”

After passing the House, the bill moves to the Senate for consideration.

Here is what other Democratic members are saying about the Republican “Kill at Will” bill:

“The big-government, “Shoot First” bill handcuffs local communities from taking crucial, commonsense steps to reduce gun violence, making our schools and neighborhoods less safe,” said Rep. Nickie Antonio (D-Lakewood). “This unconstitutional attack on self-government kills the abil-ity for citizens to come together in their communities to decide what’s right for them and creates a one-size-fits-all policy that does more to appease the gun lobby than protect the lives of Ohioans.”

“Despite opposition from the community, law enforcement and prosecu-tors, this Republican-led legislature is intentionally causing more divisions in Ohio by passing so-called “Stand Your Ground” legislation,” said Ohio Legislative Black Caucus President and state Rep. Stephanie Howse (D-Cleveland). “This type of legislation is dangerous and leads to justified murder. The leaders of the Republican Party have shown their disregard for Ohioans and especially their disregard of black lives. It is a sad day in Ohio and I pray that one day my colleagues on the other side of the aisle will truly value the voices and lives of Ohioans—especially the 18 percent minority population of Ohio—and not intentionally divide Ohioans based on unfounded fear.”

“Although I support an individual’s right to carry, I believe stand your ground expands gun laws to the detriment of our communities by allowing individuals to shoot first and ask questions later,” said Rep. Thomas West (D-Canton). “We already had the Castle Doctrine in Ohio, which was adequate enough to allow us to protect ourselves by using force, including deadly force, in our homes or cars when we needed to. The Castle Doctrine encouraged people in those situations to avoid violence as much as possible, which is what we need during times of high stress and fear. Now our com-munities across Ohio will be more susceptible to gun violence and less safe for our families.”

Dayton Leaders Advise Toledoans on Establishing a Pre-School Program

By Fletcher Word
Sojourner’s Truth Editor

Dayton, Ohio Mayor Nan Whaley and Robyn Lightcap, executive director of Dayton’s Preschool Promise, came to Toledo on Wednesday, November 14, to address an audience of about 75 community leaders on the Dayton pre-kindergarten program – a program that has enrolled more than 1,300 four-year-olds in less than two years.

In attendance at the presentation were board members and leaders from the Toledo Public Schools as well as representatives from groups such as United Way, Toledo Community Foundation, ProMedica and the Toledo Opera (which offers a music program for pre-schoolers).

The presentation, organized by Toledo Mayor Wade Kapszukiewicz, offered a model that Toledoans might well incorporate into a program of its own, at least in part, explained Kapszukiewicz, as he introduced his counterpart from Dayton and Lightcap, the program director.

“Nineteen percent of the kids who come to [TPS] are ready for kindergarten,” said Kapszukiewicz, venting his frustration at the lack of progress Toledo has made on this very important issue. “If we doubled that number, we would still be behind the state average … and the state is doing poorly. To be the city we want to be, we have to do more. I don’t want us to survive as a community, I want us to thrive. There has been gathering momentum that this is something worth doing.”

The Dayton program, said Mayor Whaley, got a big boost in November 2016 when city leaders asked the voters for help in “moving the needle on third grade reading.” Third grade reading test results are the most effective measure of how well students are prepared and on how students are going to fare in the future.

Lightcap advised Toledoans to “just do it!” rather than wait for an 80 page report. “Start it now,” she said. She also suggested an attendance incentive program and that the city create a non-profit organization to manage the program rather than turning it over to the city bureaucracy and elected officials.

Dayton, according to its leaders, has improved children’s school readiness scores and increased state-measured quality ratings at 26 preschool sites.

Of course, the devil is in the details and the details are in the dollars. Dayton managed to pass a 0.25-percent income tax increase in 2016, part of which is allocated for family tuition assistance. Kapszukiewicz has not yet indicated if such a request is part of his plans but he did mention an early 2019 announcement that will provide the details about how such a program might be implemented and the financial arrangements required while also mentioning the fact that community philanthropy will be part of those arrangements.

out for commonsense gun safety measures, the entrenched majority continues to push legislation that makes our communities less safe,” said state Rep. Tavia Galonski (D-Akron). “I will continue to stand with the vast majority of Ohioans who oppose these extreme bills that give a free pass to gun violence.”

“If we want young people to stay in Ohio, we need to make sure they feel safe. They don’t want to see gun penalties reduced and an expansion of the ability to use deadly force,” said Rep. Kristin Boggs (D-Columbus). “Our children want to be able to go to the movies, or a concert, or out with friends and not be afraid of a potential mass shooting. They want to live in places and cities that are trying to pass reasonable gun control measures. This bill doesn’t make anyone safer.”

“We’re constantly confronted with images of gun violence, and as public officials, it’s our responsibility to respond to these threats. Measures have been proposed regarding Red Flag laws, better background checks, protection from domestic violence offenders and more—but we are not considering those measures today,” said state Rep. David Leland (D-Columbus). Instead, HB 228 guts Ohio’s concealed carry statute, making all of us less safe by making crimes such as illegally carrying a concealed handgun punishable by a slap on the wrist. The bill also implements ‘shoot first ask questions later’ provisions that only create a greater likelihood of gun violence.

“Finally, the bill keeps cities from passing gun safety ordinances. Thomas Jefferson once said, ‘The government closest to the people serves the people best.’ The issues are not the same in Belpre as they are in Cleveland as they are in Columbus. Let’s let the governments closest to their citizens do their duty to protect their communities.
Lucas County Children Services Kicks Off 2018 Holiday Gift Drive Annual Campaign “Gives the

The holiday season is almost upon us, and Lucas County Children Services (LCCS) is once again asking area residents to “Give the Best Gift Ever” this holiday season!

The agency is kicking off its annual Holiday Gift Drive, which is co-sponsored by the Friends of Lucas County Children Services (FLCCS) and several community partners. The community-based campaign is expected to provide gifts to as many as 2,500 children who are victims of abuse and neglect. Gift collection begins November 16, and runs through December 14, 2018.

The drive provides gifts for children living in foster care, with relatives or with their families under LCCS supervision. “This has been a difficult year for the children of Lucas County. Our data tells us that abuse and neglect continue to rise, in no small part to the incidence of substance abuse in our community. Giving these children a reason to smile at the holiday season is really important. Lucas County residents have been very generous in the past, and we hope they will continue that tradition of giving,” says Robin Reese, LCCS executive director.

The gift drive provides toys for children from birth to age 18. While we are seeking gifts for all age groups, the agency is in particular need of gifts for children of all ethnic groups who are newborn to three years old, and gift cards for teenagers.

Several generous community partners are again stepping up to support the gift drive. Key sponsors include PNC Bank; Bennett Management Corp., a franchisee of BURGER KING Corporation®, and La-Z-Boy; other partners include Allshred Services; Barnes & Noble Toledo Brondes Ford; The Counterstop Shop; DANA Corporation; Franklin Park Mall; Levic Commons; Teamsters Local 20; Toledo Auto Care; radio station WAVE 101.5 The River, WTVL; and Woodcraft. Local residents are encouraged to drop a new, unwrapped toy in the collection boxes located around the community:

• Allshred Services, 3940 Technology Drive in Maumee. • Brondes Ford, 1511 Reynolds Rd., Maumee and 3425 Secor Rd., Toledo. • All Toledo-area BURGER KING® restaurants in Holland, Maumee, Northwood, Oregon, Toledo, and Lambertville, Mich. • The Counterstop Shop, 9880 Airport Hwy. • Franklin Park Mall, 5001 Monroe Street, Toledo (pick an ornament from the wish tree) • La-Z-Boy Furniture stores, 5804 Airport Hwy. and 5173 Monroe St. In Toledo; and 3162 Navarre Ave. In Oregon. • Toledo Auto Care, 4544 Monroe St. and 5326 Heatherdowns, Toledo. • The Town Center at Levic Commons, 3201 Levic Commons Blvd., Perrysburg. • Woodcraft, 5311 Airport Highway, Toledo. • WTVL studios, 750 N. Summit St., Toledo.

Additionally, the Barnes & Noble Bookellers at 4340 Monroe Street in Toledo has designated the LCCS Holiday Gift Drive as the recipient of its 2018 holiday book donation campaign, which encourages customers to purchase books to be donated to the gift drive.

Several special events are being scheduled to encourage Toledo-area residents to support the gift drive. Hensville Tree Lighting Visitors to the downtown Hensville tree lighting on Monroe Street on Saturday, November 17, are encouraged to donate a new, unwrapped toy at one of the donation stations in the Hensville/St. Clair St. corridor.

Levis Commons Tree Lighting Levis Commons in Perrysburg begins its holiday season with a tree lighting on November 17 at 5 p.m. Visitors will be encouraged to donate a new, unwrapped toy at the LCCS tent and grab a bag of popcorn to munch on. Lights Before Christmas, Toledo Zoo The Toledo Zoo kicks off is annual “Lights Before Christmas” on November 23, including the ribbon cutting for the renovated tunnel under the Anthony Wayne Trail. LCCS staff will be on hand at both zoo entrances from 4 to 7 p.m. to collect donations.

Ohio Teacher of the Year – TPS Career Employee - Honored

This month, state Senator Edna Brown (D-Toledo) presented a resolution to Mona Al-Hayani in honor of being named the 2019 Ohio Teacher of the Year. Each year, the Ohio Department of Education offers this award to an exceptional teacher in recognition of their work in and outside the classroom.

“Our teachers are among the most influential people in a young adult’s life,” said Senator Brown. “Ms. Al-Hayani challenges her students to not only become the best scholars they can be, but to also exercise civic responsibility so that they may grow into informed and engaged citizens. She is not just a teacher but a role model in every regard.”

A history teacher at Toledo Early College High School, Al-Hayani has spent her entire 23-year teaching career with Toledo Public Schools. At Toledo Early College, she advises the National Honor Society and Young Women for Change, a student-led organization. Al-Hayani is the vice president of the Toledo Federation of Teachers and serves as the Federation’s Director of Human Trafficking and Social Justice Issues. She is a two-time U.S. Department of Education Fulbright Hayes awardee and the first educator from Toledo Public Schools to receive the Ohio Teacher of the Year award.

Caregiver Expo Aims to Help Family Caregivers Provide Self-Care and Find Providers for their Loved One

With about 60 exhibitors, nationally known speaker and author, Kathryn M. Kilpatrick, M.A., CCC/SLP, and a complimentary lunch, the free Caregivers Expo will be an event where family caregivers are celebrated and strengthened in their role.

The Caregiver Expo was held on Saturday, November 10, at Parkway Place, 2592 Parkway Plaza in Maumee. Daughters, sons, spouses, church members, and others that care for an aging loved one were welcomed to this event. While they may not think of themselves as caregivers, those who help an aging loved one with any of the following activities are the focus of this event: helping with grocery shopping, picking up prescriptions, going to doctor appointments, helping with meals and/or paying bills. The event connected caregivers with resources to support them in their caregiving role.

Caregiver Expo Aims to Help Family Caregivers Provide Self-Care and Find Providers for their Loved One

With about 60 exhibitors, nationally known speaker and author, Kathryn M. Kilpatrick, M.A., CCC/SLP, and a complimentary lunch, the free Caregiver Expo will be an event where family caregivers are celebrated and strengthened in their role.

The Caregiver Expo was held on Saturday, November 10, at Parkway Place, 2592 Parkway Plaza in Maumee. Laughters, sons, spouses, church members, and others that care for an aging loved one were welcomed to this event.

While they may not think of themselves as caregivers, those who help an aging loved one with any of the following activities are the focus of this event: helping with grocery shopping, picking up prescriptions, going to doctor appointments, helping with meals and/or paying bills. The event connected caregivers with resources to support them in their caregiving role.

The unpaid care provided by these individuals is how 37 percent of the long-term care in this country is provided, with paid care by nursing homes, home health agencies, and others making up the remaining 13 percent.

This selfless work caring for a loved one can be extremely stressful and can eventually take a toll on the health of the family caregivers if they don’t make a conscious effort to take care of themselves. Caregivers often make sure the individual they care for makes their doctors’ appointments, eats well and gets enough rest while at the same time neglecting to do the same for themselves. Some studies show that about 50 percent of caregivers die before the people they care for.

The stress that often takes a toll on caregivers who try to go it alone in caring for their aging loved one is usually twofold: time constraints and financial constraints. At the event, free resources were available to help address all these different types of strains.

By utilizing some of the resources available in the community to supplement the care they provide and getting a temporary break when they need it, family caregivers can care better and longer for their loved one.

Sometimes all a caregiver needs is a temporary break from their caregiving duties so they do not prematurely have to stop giving the care they provide. There are a variety of ways a temporary break can be provided. For more information, contact 419-382-0624 or www.AreaOfficeOnAging.com.

The unpaid care provided by these individuals is how 37 percent of the long-term care in this country is provided, with paid care by nursing homes, home health agencies, and others making up the remaining 13 percent.

This selfless work caring for a loved one can be extremely stressful and can eventually take a toll on the health of the family caregivers if they don’t make a conscious effort to take care of themselves. Caregivers often make sure the individual they care for makes their doctors’ appointments, eats well and gets enough rest while at the same time neglecting to do the same for themselves. Some studies show that about 50 percent of caregivers die before the people they care for.

The stress that often takes a toll on caregivers who try to go it alone in caring for their aging loved one is usually twofold: time constraints and financial constraints. At the event, free resources were available to help address all these different types of strains.

By utilizing some of the resources available in the community to supplement the care they provide and getting a temporary break when they need it, family caregivers can care better and longer for their loved one.

Maggie Anderson’s Black Year – Her Journey to Support Black Owned Businesses

By Fletcher Word
Sojourner’s Truth Editor

It all began some years ago in a five-star restaurant, according to what has since become legend. Maggie Anderson and her husband John were celebrating their anniversary and reflecting on their blessings. A well-educated, professional couple, living in a nice Chicago suburb, living the good life.

On that particular evening, as the only black folks in the restaurant, their conversation inevitably turned to the fact of “the discouraging status of blacks in America.”

On so many occasions, for so many people, such talk usually ends when the waiter brings the check. The Andersons discussed action on this occasion, however. They knew that Black America has a buying power approaching one trillion dollars annually but that not much of those dollars end up in the black community – two percent typically goes to black-owned businesses.

Finally, several years later, the Andersons were ready to take action. In 2009, they went black – they made the effort to only buy black. And what an effort it was.

Black-owned grocery stores were particularly difficult to find, black-owned clothing stores almost as rare. Long drives through the inner city to find businesses that had closed before the Andersons arrived.

The Andersons chronicled their adventures on a website and then in a book titled Our Black Year. Why was Anderson so driven to undertake such a challenge – the “Empowerment Experiment?”

“It was mostly guilt,” Anderson told The Truth several years ago when we spoke to her from her home in Chicago. “And secondly, frustration. As a financially-blessed black mother, I felt so powerless and frustrated by the asymmetry between all the talents, resources and buying power … and what was actually represented in and reinvested in our neighborhoods. I hated feeling like the system and some unknown, uncontrollable forces were dictating the future of my kids and my community. The Experiment showed me that I could do something and that everything that hurts us is absolutely reversible. That kind of enlightenment and empowerment is a precious blessing that cannot be expressed in words. The overwhelming sense of depression is gone now because I support black businesses every day.”

What do black-owned business need to do to enhance their presence in the consciousness of potential black consumers?

“I get that question a lot because people see struggling black businesses that are not delivering the best possible goods, value or service and use that as an excuse not to seek and support their own,” said Anderson. “So those folks want to hear Maggie Anderson blame our businesses so they can be justified for preventing the recycling of our wealth and feel no responsibility for contributing to the demise of our culture and neighborhoods.”

“I think that if our people were to look at how hard it is for our businesses and accept responsibility for crippling them, maybe we’d focus more on supporting them and less on stereotyping and criticizing them and talking about what they need to do to earn our business. And then we should be spending just at least as much time talking about what all those mainstream brands and all those outside groups, that do nothing for our community, need to do to earn our blind support.”

What are the great challenges for black-owned businesses in their pursuit to grab a piece of the consumers’ dollars?

“It is obvious that the major problem facing our... continued on page 11
The Importance of Supporting Black-Owned Businesses

By Jay Black
Guest Column

I have studied this issue for some time now and have come to the conclusion that we will not solve the economic and social problems that have plagued our community for the past few generations unless we change our thinking and behavior relative to supporting our businesses.

Why, you might ask?

When we don’t have control over our own commerce we are at the mercy and control of others. Have you wondered how non-black-owned businesses (white, Middle Eastern, Asian) dominate the small businesses in our community while at the same time knowing that they would never allow this to happen in reverse in their communities?

It is called the control of commerce.

Have you wondered why every other ethnic group supports its own except us? Perhaps they understand this concept more than we do. I must add that it is not possible at this time for us to spend 100 percent of our discretionary income with black-owned businesses because we are not in every business discipline locally. For instance, there are no black-owned new RV dealers in this area so there is no opportunity to buy a new unit from an African American.

The good news is we can begin to reverse these adverse trends by consciously changing our behavior and by spending some of our money with African Americans on a consistent basis. I challenge you to make an effort consciously changing our behavior and by spending some of our money with African Americans on a consistent basis. I challenge you to make an effort to patronize a black-owned business at least three times a month for starters. If you need help with finding quality African-American businesses call the TAACC office. Listed below are just three benefits of supporting our businesses on a regular basis.

1. We have greater control of what goes on in our community. For those of you who are old enough remember the days when Dorr, City Park, Division and Collingwood streets formed the core of our communities’ business district, there was a tremendous sense of pride in knowing that we “owned something.” Our children saw black business owners on a daily basis and could more readily aspire to be one of them. We had control over who worked in those businesses and our dollar turned over multiple times before it left our community. The unemployment rate was much lower in our community then than it is today.

2. Unemployment Rate. We will begin to reduce the unemployment rate in our community if we can help our businesses grow. Go into any African-American owned business and you are apt to see African Americans working in them. There is a large and growing segment in our community whom no one will hire (except us). These are the ex-felons, and Bobos, Junebugs, Shykondas and Aquacenas in our families and churches. There are approximately 2.0 million African-American owned businesses in America and approximately 1.9 million unemployment amongst African Americans. If we would help our businesses grow by patronizing them on a consistent basis we could conceivably solve the unemployment problem in our community.

3. Crime Rate. We can reduce the crime rates in our community by helping our businesses grow. How? When Pookie is gainfully employed he doesn’t have time to get with the wrong crowd and consequently get into trouble. We could also drastically reduce the recidivism rates for those who are currently in the system if they had access to gainful employment once they exit the system.

Insights on the Movement to Support Black-Owned Businesses

Owners of black-owned businesses may have increased opportunities to attract new customers due to recent societal changes.

July 22, 2016

Recent events involving the African-American community are alarming and distressing. But the resulting call within the community to support black-owned companies may have the potential to be game-changing for some small businesses.

“Although many recent events have been unfortunate, the black community has awakened to the fact that they can create opportunities and use resources within their own communities,” says Phillip Dunn, a BOB (Black-Owned Business) advocate and CEO of A Seat At The Table, a company that seeks to generate more business for BOBs. “We’ve recently seen a reconnection of sorts within the culture [that’s] bringing Black Americans closer together,” says Dunn. “The ongoing events have forced the community to look inward for solutions.”

The African-American community has definitely been shocked into action, adds Shekira Dennis, civic leader and co-founder of the Houston Justice Coalition. “The economic driver is to ensure that we are supporting black-owned and operated businesses by recirculating our dollars in the African-American business community.”

Money Makes a Statement

Misty Starks, CEO of Misty Blue Media, a public relations and content creation company, agrees. “Many black Americans feel that if we can’t get justice and equality in our neighborhoods, schools, at work and in the court system, we’ll use the one thing we know will get attention and spark change, and that’s historically been money. We can chant, we can march and we can create catchy hashtags on social media, but it all falls on deaf ears until money is involved. This movement to patronize black businesses is definitely offering smaller, unknown businesses a lot more visibility and opportunity.”

As a result of the movement, some consumers are taking the time to actually research African-American businesses and patronize them, adds Dennis. “This will benefit small businesses and bring some long overdue exposure to their community.”

We’ve recently seen a reconnection of sorts within the culture [that’s] bringing black Americans closer together. The ongoing events have forced the community to look inward for solutions.

—Phillip Dunn, CEO, A Seat at the Table

As black consumers use word-of-mouth tactics to bring visibility to BOBs, newer small businesses may benefit from the call to “buy Black” by being able to start off with a sufficient customer base from within their community, adds Dunn. “In addition to an increase in revenues and income for BOBs, the migration will provide them with opportunities for growth, such as hiring more staff, which drives down the unemployment rate, and expansion into new markets.”

Historically, black-owned businesses have tried to market to the black community. But many BOBs have faced a lack of consistent support and acknowledgement, believes Robert Van Arlen, an international speaker, trainer and coach. “Recently, the press has caused the black community to galvanize and support. Black businesses that have always advertised and marketed towards the community are also finding it easier to retain existing consumers and gain new ones.”

Take Advantage of the Movement

In order to continue to ride the change in tide, black business owners who act with a sense of urgency may be able to attract, secure and retain this new influx of customers, as well as existing ones, believes Dunn. “This will require a transformation in thought leadership, operating practices and historical beliefs about black consumers, which could result in increased entrepreneurship in the black community. As an increasing number of individuals become comfortable with...continued on page 13
Friday Black: Stories by Nana Kwame Adjei-Brenyah

By Terri Schlesemer

The Truth Contributor

You are the strongest person you know. You can lift and carry a lot of weight and many burdens, because strength comes from within as well as from muscles. So what are you capable of doing when times get strange? Place yourself in the short stories inside Friday Black by Nana Kwame Adjei-Brenyah, and see.

Emmanuel had grown up with a strength his parents nurtured. They taught him everything they knew about keeping a young Black man alive; because of that, Emmanuel rarely resented his “Blackness” at the top of a one-to-ten scale. At most he kept it somewhere near the middle. But in “The Finkelstein 5,” when a white man was acquitted of killing five black kids with a chainsaw, Emmanuel doubted if he was strong enough to keep his Blackness at anything less than a “10.”

Anything less than the blunt truth is a bad thing in “The Eire,” and Ben knows it. He was not “optimized” at birth, however, so no matter how truthful he is, he will never be as cool as some of the boys in his “How It Was class.” He will never make anyone happy, and that’s fine. He’ll get by because the New Federation makes sure everyone has access to a daily syrup full of Good. Ben gets his at school every day. He wishes he could get more. He’s in danger of becoming a “shoelocker” and it will take strength to avoid that.

The gates in front of the store were holding—now. It’s Black Friday and as customers press forward, there’s a stampede and a little girl faints. Lance is working clean-up, and he tries to get her body out of the way but the child’s mother grabs the doll and she’s broken for any bargain she can find. What’s the narrator of Friday Black doing here? Bodies pile up even higher before the day’s over and shoppers are gone home. In the meantime, he’ll sell more shoes than anyone else; he’ll see more dozing, half-crazed buyers than anyone; and he’ll win the annual contest.

The strongest always does... Picking up Friday Black won’t be difficult. Opening it is a piece of cake. It doesn’t weigh much at all, but the stories inside are heavy, so beware.

In a dozen short tales and just under 200 pages, author Nana Kwame Adjei-Brenyah takes readers on quite a ride. It starts with a tale that, if you squint, isn’t so very implausible at all, and moves toward the dystopian before slyly commenting on greed and American consumerism. If that sounds like a two-ton book, well, you’re almost right: most of these tales are hefty, but they’re also infinitely entertaining and irresistible. Reading them is like nibbling at futuristic leftovers, but the future is tomorrow.

For a fan of stick-with-you stories, this book is a winner. It’s perfect for readers who don’t want the same old thing, or want something quick to read if you’re looking for an early gift to give. Friday Black is a pretty strong bet.

the level of support from within the community, they will be more likely to risk starting and operating a business.

When black business owners do get an increase in business, Dunn advises being prepared. “If you own a small restaurant with 42 chairs operating near full capacity every day, you may not be ready to effectively absorb a five to 15 percent increase in customers,” he says. “It’s important for OBUs to anticipate this requirement and staff accordingly. Otherwise, some new consumers may revert to prior spending behaviors and choices.”

Van Arlen suggests seizing the opportunity by developing marketing materials that engage the community, such as websites, flyers and radio ads. “It’s also a great time for black-owned businesses to look for sources of capital if needed, because my expenditure in marketing has the opportunity to produce a greater ROI.”

Perhaps most importantly, if you’re going to succeed at increasing business, you must focus on supporting top-quality black businesses that do exist. Once we do that, those businesses can grow and locate their plants and retail outlets in underserved black neighborhoods. Not only could they counter unemployment there, they could help attract more investment — black and non — to the struggling areas that are currently underserved.

“Another major impact is that black businesses trying to earn more contracts with larger main stream corporations can more effectively negotiate and might even be actively recruited if those big firms see the power of a mobilized black consumer base. We would see a lot more of our products on the shelves of the major retailers, a lot more black franchises and a lot more contracts being given to our entrepreneurs and professionals if corporate America were to see that black consumers are starting to be more loyal to black businesses.”

In the time since Maggie Anderson started The Empowerment Experiment Foundation, she has appeared on a variety of television and radio shows explaining the purpose of the Experiment.

Anderson earned her BA from Emory University and her law degree and masters in business administration from the University of Chicago.

“I cannot, after our journey and living my life as a conscious consumer now, say that black businesses need to do more to appeal to me,” said Anderson. “Once I realized how important it was to find them, I was able to support them. It is not as hard as people think.”

St. Paul Missionary Baptist Church Holds Annual Health Awareness Day

Attending to the Needs of Others

On Saturday, November 17, 2018, the St. Paul Missionary Baptist Church shared a message of love and caring with the community.

It was St. Paul’s Annual Heath Awareness Day. Thanksgiving baskets were also given as a part of the sharing in love at this holiday season. Baskets were filled with all of the necessities for a bountiful thanksgiving dinner.

Pastor James H. Willis Sr. and the Christian Board of Education expressed great appreciation to the ABC (Health Care Agency) that rendered this service to the church and community. Deaconess Mary Reed, a St. Paul member and an ABC Health Administrator, organized this event, an event that has taken place for the past six years. Reed always has a passion for wellness along with a belief that physical health and spiritual well-being go hand in hand.

The Top Ladies of Distinction volunteered and participated in the blessing of giving to others. Reed currently serves as the president of this group of women. The Top Ladies gave away African-American dolls to those in the care of Children Services along with Thanksgiving food baskets. They also passed out information on diabetes, Alzheimer’s, sickle cell anemia as well as the conducting screenings for blood pressure.

Reaching out to help with the needs of others is very much a part of this historical church.
