

Anti-Racism Teach-Ins

Live on Zoom!

<https://us02web.zoom.us/j/87347454267>

Meeting ID 873 4745 4267

5:00-6:00 p.m.

Mondays and Wednesdays

From August 3rd to September 2nd

Hosted by the Toledo Lucas County Public Library

Formal education represents and reproduces the white supremacy that is inherent to the material taught, the discipline dispensed, and the teaching and administrative faculty hired and fired. The implicit biases of all of us deeply affect students, their chances for success, and their future participation in the discourse of power.

We need to work through the problem of white supremacy in all levels of education and these teach-ins are safe spaces to do that--offering tools to use, knowledge we haven't had, and the opportunity to practice discussion in a skillfully facilitated space.

This series of teach-ins proposes a collaboration among teachers in P-12, higher education and community partners to name, describe, and undo the white supremacy that pervades the organizations in which we work.

A "teach in" is a participatory educational activity to share knowledge and generate energy toward the confrontation of an important political issue. It doesn't limit the time frame or set the syllabus and recognizes a wide variety of types of expertise and sources of knowledge—street knowledge, life knowledge, ancestral knowledge, and book knowledge.

We intend the teach-ins as one contribution to efforts to reimagining and rebuilding our schools and universities as inclusive, equitable, and antiracist sites of educational opportunity.

August 24, 2020 5:00-6:00 PM

A Critical Look at Systemic Racism in Education: Why Racial Equity Policies are Important

Dr. Hope Bland

Adjunct Professor, Africana Studies and Social Work
(Human Trafficking and Social Justice Institute)

August 26, 2020 5:00-6:00 PM

Antiracist Pedagogy as Praxis: Developing Personal Commitments to Racially Inclusive Classrooms

Quatez Scott

PhD Candidate in the
Judith Herb College of Education

Meeting Details

Meetings will take place virtually through Zoom. When coronavirus limits on gatherings are lifted, teach-ins will continue on Zoom but will also meet simultaneously at TLCPL Mott Branch Library at 1010 Dorr St, Toledo, OH 43607

For more go to the Anti-Racism Teach-Ins Facebook Page
www.facebook.com/profile.php?id=100053978557767

This is not an officially sanctioned event of the University of Toledo.

